Confidently Auditing Clinical Documentation:

A Primer for Quality Assurance, Performance Improvement & Clinical Proficiency

Webinar • Thursday, October 12, 2017 • 1:00—2:30 pm CST

Presented by: Cindy Krafft, PT, MS, HCS-O & Dee Kornetti, PT
Kornetti & Krafft Health Care Solutions

The important task of auditing interdisciplinary documentation is not an easy one. Evaluating the quality of the content for disciplines that are different from the clinical background of the reviewers is especially challenging. With many internal and external reviewers having a background in nursing, therapy documentation can seem like a foreign language. Many agencies have first hand experience with denials and the associated loss of revenue due to “insufficient “ therapy documentation but still lack confidence that they can proactively manage the ever-present risks.

This session will provide a solid foundation for auditing the quality of clinical documentation by focusing on the key elements that define and confirm “skilled, reasonable and necessary”. Attendees will come away from this session empowered to confidently audit clinical documentation in an effective and efficient manner.
